PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION:

This vernacular farm house was built c. 1825. A rear addition was probably constructed in the late 19th century. The core is an 18 x 25 two story house with three bays. The house has interior end chimneys in the gable ends that are corbelled and clad in cream colored stucco, as is the house. The end gabled roof is clad with asphalt shingles. The door has an interesting semicircular transom above it. There is some evidence for the existence of a pent roof in earlier times. Windows on the façade have shutters. There is a large two story frame addition on this house. The addition is clad in wooden shingles and has a shed roof. Its footprint extends beyond the right end of the core and is extremely incompatible with the original structure.

Classification: The house has been altered and is a Class II resource.
