PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION:

This highly obscured resource includes a core constructed in the Penn Plan mode of Colonial architecture, with additions, as well as two contributing outbuildings.

The principal resource is the stone Penn Plan house, built perpendicular and adjacent to the road. Attached to the north end are two additions, both clad in stucco. Oddly, much of the main façade of the northern addition has no windows and almost appears as if it was once a small barn. The house has an end gabled, asphalt covered roof. The core measures 15' wide; the overall length of the house is 50'. There are flush chimneys on both ends of the core. Other details were obscured by vegetation

Associated Resources:

Outbuilding: There are two associated resources. One is an end gabled, asphalt shingled building constructed into a slope. It has stone and frame walls, a dormer, and a small cupola.

Shed: A salt-boxed roof (asphalt shingles) shed is located northwest of the house. It includes beveled siding and a stone foundation.

Classification: This is a rare building type and should be considered Class II.
